For the last two decades, despite efforts to reform defective child protection systems, children in the Black Sea region remain among the most vulnerable socio-economic groups. This scenario has been perpetuated by the fact that the implementation of significant reforms is hindered by inadequate funding, competing political priorities, lack of shared regional learnt lessons and best practices, and particularly, by the absence of a strong and vocal civil society able to hold governments at account for their promises and implementation deficits.

In this context, the project aims to promote the advancement of child protection reforms in the partner’s countries by strengthening the position of national child-focused networks of CSOs.

The project’s overall objective is to support the national child-focused NGO coalitions so that they can effectively advance child protection reforms in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Moldova and Ukraine.
